

FOR COACHES WHO WANT A FULL CALENDAR

The Client Attraction Content Pack

30 ready-to-post social media scripts that turn followers into booked calls — written so you never stare at a blank screen again

Works for every coaching niche • Copy, personalize, post • No content experience needed

Read this first (it takes 2 minutes)

Here's the truth about why most coaches struggle to get clients online: it's not the algorithm, and it's not that you need 10,000 followers. It's that most coaches post randomly. One day it's a quote graphic, the next day it's nothing for two weeks. There's no system, so there's no result.

This pack fixes that. Inside you'll find 30 posts I'd actually use, organized into the 6 categories that matter: posts that build your authority, posts that tell stories, posts that challenge what your audience believes, posts that start conversations, posts that crush objections, and posts that directly fill your calendar. Rotate through the categories and you'll never post "randomly" again.

How to use these posts

- 1. Fill in the blanks. Anywhere you see [brackets], swap in your own details. [YOUR NICHE] becomes "weight loss" or "sales" or "confidence" — whatever you coach. [RESULT] becomes the outcome you actually deliver. The more specific you get, the better these perform.
- 2. Make it sound like you. These are scripts, not scripture. If a sentence doesn't sound like something you'd say out loud, change it. Your audience follows you, not a template.
- 3. Post 3-5 times per week, and mix categories. A good weekly rhythm: one story post, one authority post, one engagement post, one call-to-action post. Never post CTAs back to back — you'll sound like an infomercial.
- 4. Every post points somewhere. Your bio, your captions, your comments — they should all lead people to one place: the booking calendar on your website. Traffic without a destination is wasted effort.
- 5. Reuse everything. Nobody remembers what you posted 60 days ago. Once you've cycled through all 30, start again with fresh examples and updated numbers. This pack is a year of content if you treat it right.

One rule before you start: done beats perfect. The coach who posts a decent post today beats the coach still "planning content" next month. Pick post #1, fill in the blanks, and publish it before you finish reading this PDF.

SECTION 1 · POSTS 1–5

Authority Builders

These posts position you as the obvious expert in your niche. People don't book calls with coaches they like — they book calls with coaches they trust to solve their problem. This is where that trust starts.

01

The "3 Mistakes" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

3 mistakes I see people make with [YOUR NICHE] over and over again:

1. [COMMON MISTAKE #1] — this one feels productive, but it's actually keeping you stuck.
2. [COMMON MISTAKE #2] — almost everyone does this, and almost nobody realizes it's the reason they're not seeing results.
3. Trying to figure it all out alone. The people who get [RESULT] fastest aren't smarter. They just stopped guessing.

I spent years learning this the hard way so you don't have to.

Which one are you guilty of? Be honest in the comments.

WHY IT WORKS: Naming the exact mistakes your audience is making right now creates an instant "how did they know that?" moment. That feeling is what authority is made of.

02

The "Unpopular Process" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

Everyone wants [RESULT]. Almost nobody wants the process.

The process is unsexy. It's [SIMPLE DAILY ACTION] when you don't feel like it. It's showing up on the boring days. It's doing the basics longer than feels reasonable.

My clients don't get [RESULT] because I hand them some secret. They get it because I make the process impossible to quit.

That's the real job of a coach. Not motivation — structure.

If you've been waiting for motivation to show up, this is your sign that it's not coming. Build the structure instead.

WHY IT WORKS: This post filters your audience. Tire-kickers scroll past. Serious people — the ones who become paying clients — feel seen and keep reading.

03

The "What I'd Do in 30 Days" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

If I had to get [RESULT] from scratch in 30 days, here's exactly what I'd do:

Week 1: [FIRST STEP]. Nothing else. Most people fail because they try to do everything at once.

Week 2: [SECOND STEP]. This is where momentum starts.

Week 3: [THIRD STEP]. By now you'd already be ahead of 90% of people.

Week 4: Review what's working, cut what isn't, and double down.

Simple? Yes. Easy? No. That's exactly why most people never do it.

Save this post. Then actually do week 1.

WHY IT WORKS: "Here's my exact plan" posts get saved and shared more than almost any other format — and every save tells the algorithm to show you to more people.

04

The "Client Question" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

A client asked me something this week that I can't stop thinking about:

"[COMMON QUESTION YOUR CLIENTS ASK]"

Here's what I told them: [YOUR SHORT, HONEST ANSWER — 2 TO 3 SENTENCES].

It's funny — people think coaching is about complicated strategies. Most of the time, it's about someone finally giving you a straight answer.

What's the one question about [YOUR NICHE] you've never gotten a straight answer to?

Drop it below — I'll answer as many as I can.

WHY IT WORKS: You demonstrate coaching in public. Readers watch you answer a real question and think "imagine what a full hour with this person is like."

05

The "Simple Truth" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

After working with [NUMBER] people on [YOUR NICHE], here's the one pattern I can't unsee:

The ones who succeed aren't more talented. They aren't more disciplined. They don't have more time.

They just have someone in their corner who catches the problem in week 2 instead of month 6.

That's it. That's the whole advantage. Speed of correction beats everything else.

You can keep troubleshooting alone, or you can borrow someone's pattern recognition. One of those takes years. The other takes a conversation.

WHY IT WORKS: "Pattern I noticed across many clients" is proof of experience without bragging. It quietly says: I've done this a lot.

SECTION 2 · POSTS 6–10

Story & Transformation

Facts tell, stories sell. These posts use narrative — yours and your clients' — to make people feel the before-and-after. Story posts consistently outperform every other content type for coaches.

06

The "Client Win" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

Got a message from a client this morning that made my whole week.

When we started working together, they were [BEFORE STATE — e.g., stuck, overwhelmed, doubting themselves].

[TIMEFRAME] later? [SPECIFIC WIN — the more concrete, the better].

And the best part isn't even the result. It's what they said: "[SHORT CLIENT QUOTE — one sentence about how they feel now]."

This is why I do what I do.

If you're where they were [TIMEFRAME] ago, know this: the gap between you and them is smaller than you think.

WHY IT WORKS: Prospects don't project themselves onto your success — they project onto your clients'. Every client win post is a mirror for your next client.

07

The "My Rock Bottom" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

I don't talk about this much, but here's where I actually started:

[YOUR HONEST BEFORE STATE — the struggle that led you to this work. 2 to 3 sentences. Don't polish it.]

The turning point wasn't dramatic. It was the day I [THE SMALL DECISION OR REALIZATION THAT CHANGED THINGS].

Everything I teach now comes from that moment. I'm not coaching from a mountaintop — I'm coaching from the other side of the exact thing you're going through.

If you're in the middle of it right now, I see you. And I promise the other side exists.

WHY IT WORKS: Vulnerability builds trust faster than credentials. People hire coaches who have walked their road, not coaches who seem perfect.

08

The "Day in the Life" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

What working with a [YOUR NICHE] coach actually looks like (because most people have no idea):

It's not someone yelling motivation at you. It's a weekly call where we look at what happened, figure out what's working, and adjust.

It's a message mid-week when you're about to fall off — and a plan to catch you before you do.

It's someone tracking your progress when you're too close to see it yourself.

Small corrections, applied consistently, by someone who's seen your exact situation dozens of times. That's the whole magic trick.

Curious what that would look like for your situation specifically? My calendar link is in my bio — the first call is free and there's zero pressure on it.

WHY IT WORKS: Most people have never hired a coach and secretly don't know what they'd be paying for. Demystifying it removes the fear of the unknown — the #1 silent objection.

09

The "Anniversary" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

[TIMEFRAME] ago I made a decision that changed everything: I decided to take [YOUR NICHE] seriously.

Back then: [2 TO 3 SHORT LINES ABOUT YOUR BEFORE STATE].

Today: [2 TO 3 SHORT LINES ABOUT YOUR CURRENT STATE].

Same person. Same 24 hours in a day. The only difference is I stopped treating [RESULT] like something that happens to other people.

One decision. That's how every transformation starts. What's yours going to be?

WHY IT WORKS: Before-and-after in time-lapse form. It's inspirational without being preachy, and it plants the idea that a single decision — like booking a call — starts everything.

10

The "Almost Quit" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

A client almost quit on me [TIMEFRAME] ago. I'm so glad they didn't.

They hit the wall everyone hits — that stretch where you're doing the work but can't see the results yet. They messaged me ready to walk away.

We got on a call. We didn't change the whole plan. We changed [ONE SMALL ADJUSTMENT].

Last week they hit [MILESTONE]. The breakthrough was sitting on the other side of the exact moment they wanted to quit.

It almost always is.

If you're at that wall right now — don't make a permanent decision in a temporary valley.
Talk to someone first.

WHY IT WORKS: This story pre-handles the fear of failure. It tells prospects: even when it gets hard, my coach won't let me fall — which is exactly what they're buying.

SECTION 3 · POSTS 11–15

Myth-Busters & Hot Takes

Agreeable content gets ignored. These posts respectfully challenge what your audience believes — which stops the scroll, sparks comments, and positions you as the coach who tells the truth others won't.

11

The "Stop Believing This" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

The biggest lie in [YOUR NICHE]: "[COMMON MYTH YOUR AUDIENCE BELIEVES]."

I understand why people believe it. It's everywhere. It sounds right. And believing it lets you off the hook.

But here's what's actually true: [THE REALITY — 2 TO 3 SENTENCES].

The people getting [RESULT] figured this out. The people staying stuck are still waiting for the myth to come true.

Unfollow anyone who's still selling you that story. Including the voice in your own head.

WHY IT WORKS: Contrarian posts trigger the two strongest engagement emotions: agreement ("finally someone said it") and disagreement ("actually..."). Both fill your comments.

12

The "It's Not What You Think" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

Your problem isn't [WHAT THEY THINK THEIR PROBLEM IS].

I hear it every week on my calls: "I just need [SURFACE-LEVEL FIX]."

But after [NUMBER] conversations with people in your exact situation, I can tell you the real problem is almost always [THE DEEPER ROOT CAUSE].

That's why the quick fixes keep failing you. You've been treating the symptom.

First step to solving the real problem: admitting the old approach isn't working. Second step is easier — it's a conversation.

WHY IT WORKS: Reframing their problem is the single most powerful thing a coach can do in public. If your diagnosis feels truer than their own, hiring you becomes logical.

13

The "Hard Truth" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

A hard truth about [RESULT] that nobody wants to hear:

More information is not the answer. You could read every book, watch every video, and save every post about [YOUR NICHE] — and still be in the same place next year.

You don't have an information problem. You have an implementation problem.

And implementation problems don't get solved by more scrolling. They get solved by structure, accountability, and someone who won't accept your excuses.

Read that again if you've been "researching" for more than 3 months.

WHY IT WORKS: Your warmest prospects are chronic researchers. This post calls them out with love — and positions coaching as the cure for the exact loop they're stuck in.

14

The "Both Things Are True" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

Two things can be true at once:

1. You are doing your best with what you know.
2. Your best with what you know isn't enough to get you to [RESULT].

That's not an insult. That's just how growth works — nobody self-teaches their way past their own blind spots. Not me, not you, not anyone.

Every high performer you admire has coaches. That's not a coincidence. That's the method.

Stop trying to out-effort a knowledge gap. Close the gap instead.

WHY IT WORKS: This dissolves the shame that stops people from asking for help. It says: needing a coach doesn't mean you're failing — it means you're doing what winners do.

15

The "Cheap Is Expensive" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

The most expensive thing in [YOUR NICHE] is doing it alone.

Free advice cost my client [WHAT THEIR DIY ATTEMPT COST — time, money, confidence, missed opportunity] before they came to me.

The internet gives you a thousand answers. It just can't tell you which one applies to YOUR situation. So you try them all, one by one, for years.

A coach's job is to hand you the right answer first. What you're really paying for is all the wrong turns you'll never take.

Add up what the last 12 months of guessing cost you. Then tell me coaching is expensive.

WHY IT WORKS: This post reframes price before you ever have a sales conversation. When they finally book a call, the "it costs too much" objection is already half-dead.

SECTION 4 · POSTS 16–20

Engagement & Connection

The algorithm shows your content to more people when people interact with it. These posts are engineered to get comments, replies, and conversations — which warms up cold followers into future clients.

16

The "Fill in the Blank" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

Fill in the blank:

"I'd finally feel like I've made it with [YOUR NICHE] when _____."

No wrong answers. I genuinely want to know what the finish line looks like for you — because I've noticed it's almost never what people assume.

I read every comment. Go.

WHY IT WORKS: Low-effort prompts get the most replies — and every answer is free market research. People literally tell you what result to sell them. Reply to every single comment.

17

The "A or B" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

Settle a debate for me. When it comes to [YOUR NICHE], which one is holding you back more:

A) [COMMON OBSTACLE #1 — e.g., not enough time]

B) [COMMON OBSTACLE #2 — e.g., not knowing where to start]

I've got a strong opinion on this after coaching [NUMBER] people... but I want to hear yours first.

Comment A or B. Tomorrow I'll share what I've seen actually matter — the answer surprises people.

WHY IT WORKS: Binary choices remove the friction of commenting, and the "I'll share tomorrow" open loop brings people back to your page twice. Two touches, one post.

18

The "Confession" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

Confession: I still struggle with [SOMETHING HONEST AND RELATABLE IN YOUR NICHE] sometimes.

Yes, even as a coach. Anyone who tells you they've got it 100% figured out is selling you a costume, not a person.

The difference isn't that I don't struggle. It's that I have a system for the days I do — and I no longer let a bad day become a bad month.

That system is what I really teach. Perfect people don't need coaches. Real people do.

What's the thing you still struggle with, even though you "know better"? You're safe here.

WHY IT WORKS: Perfection creates distance; honesty creates connection. This post makes you human, and humans buy from humans — especially in coaching.

19

The "Unsolicited Compliment" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

If you're reading this, I want you to know something:

The fact that you follow pages about [YOUR NICHE], save posts, and keep trying to figure this out — that already puts you ahead of most people.

Most people gave up quietly a long time ago. You didn't.

You don't need to be fixed. You need a plan that fits your actual life, and someone in your corner while you run it. That's it. That's the missing piece.

Tag someone (or just quietly raise your hand in the comments) if you needed to hear this today.

WHY IT WORKS: Encouragement posts get shared and screenshotted more than tactics ever will. And "you're not broken, you just need a plan" is the exact bridge to a booked call.

20

The "Ask Me Anything" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

For the next 24 hours, my brain is yours. Ask me anything about [YOUR NICHE].

That question you've googled 15 times and gotten 15 different answers to? Ask it.

The thing you'd only ask if nobody was watching? Ask it — DMs are open too.

The stuff people usually pay me to answer? Today it's free. I'm answering everything.

Drop your question below or send it privately. No judgment, no dumb questions, no strings.

WHY IT WORKS: AMAs generate a flood of engagement AND fill your DMs with warm conversations. A DM answering someone's real question is one small step away from "want to hop on a quick call about this?"

SECTION 5 · POSTS 21–25

Objection Crushers

Every follower who hasn't booked a call has a silent "yeah, but..." in their head. These posts answer the objections in public — so by the time they reach your calendar, the resistance is already gone.

21

The "I Don't Have Time" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

"I don't have time" is the most expensive sentence in [YOUR NICHE].

Here's the uncomfortable math: doing this WITHOUT guidance takes 5x longer than doing it with someone who's mapped the road.

You don't lack time. You're spending it on trial and error — the slowest possible route to [RESULT].

My busiest clients get the best results, and it's not a coincidence. Busy people can't afford to waste effort, so they stop guessing first.

You'll spend the time either way. The only question is whether it comes with a result at the end.

WHY IT WORKS: "No time" is objection #1 in every coaching niche. Flipping it — coaching SAVES time — turns your biggest obstacle into your best selling point.

22

The "I'll Start Later" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

"I'll start after [the holidays / things calm down / I'm less busy]."

I've heard this sentence for years. Here's what I've learned: "later" is not a date. Things never calm down. There is no version of your life where this becomes easy to start.

The clients who got [RESULT] this year? They started on a random, imperfect, inconvenient day. Just like today.

A year from now, you'll wish you had.

Perfect timing is a myth. Deciding is the whole thing.

WHY IT WORKS: Procrastination isn't laziness — it's fear wearing a calendar as a disguise. Naming it kindly but directly creates the urgency a discount never could.

23

The "Tried Everything" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

"I've tried everything and nothing works."

Someone told me this on a call recently. So I asked them to list everything they'd tried. You know what every attempt had in common?

They did all of it alone, with no feedback, and quit each one at the first plateau.

You haven't tried everything. You've tried everything EXCEPT the version where someone watches your specific situation and adjusts the plan when it stalls. That's the version that works.

Don't confuse "I've tried a lot of things" with "I've tried the right thing, correctly, for long enough." They're not the same.

WHY IT WORKS: Your most skeptical followers are your best future clients — they've proven they'll invest effort. This post gives their past failures a new explanation that isn't THEM.

24

The "What a Free Call Actually Is" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

Let me be honest about what happens on a free call with me, because I know what you're picturing:

You're picturing a 45-minute ambush that ends with me pressuring you to buy something. I get it. We've all been on that call.

Here's what actually happens: you tell me where you are, I tell you what I see, and you leave with [SPECIFIC VALUE — e.g., a clear next step, an honest diagnosis, a simple plan]. Whether we ever work together or not.

If we're a fit, I'll say so. If we're not, I'll say that too — and point you somewhere better. That's it. That's the whole call.

No pitch-slapping. No pressure. Just clarity. The link's in my bio if you want a time.

WHY IT WORKS: The real reason people don't book isn't price — it's fear of a sales trap. Kill that fear in public and watch your booking rate change.

25

The "Am I Ready?" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

"I'm not ready for a coach yet. I need to make some progress on my own first."

Read that back. It's like saying you need to get in shape before joining a gym, or clean the house before the cleaner comes.

You hire a coach BECAUSE you're at the beginning. Because you're stuck. Because you're not where you want to be. That's not the disqualifier — that's the entire point.

The only real requirement is that you're done pretending you'll figure it out "eventually."

You're not behind. You're just early. And early is the best possible time to get help.

WHY IT WORKS: "I'm not ready" quietly kills more bookings than price ever will. Dismantling it in a post reaches every lurker who was disqualifying themselves in silence.

SECTION 6 · POSTS 26–30

Calendar Fillers

Direct call-to-action posts. Use one of these every 5-7 posts — not more. All the trust you built with the other 25 posts converts into booked calls right here. Every one of these points to the calendar on your website.

26

The "Open Spots" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

Quick one: I'm opening [NUMBER] spots for new [YOUR NICHE] coaching clients this month.

Who it's for: people serious about [RESULT] who are done doing this alone.

Who it's NOT for: anyone looking for a magic pill, or planning to "start when things calm down."

First step is a free call — no pressure, no obligation. We'll look at your situation, and if I can help, I'll show you exactly how. If I can't, I'll tell you that too.

When the spots are gone, they're gone until next round.

Grab a time on my calendar — the booking link is in my bio. Takes 30 seconds.

WHY IT WORKS: Scarcity works when it's real — so keep it real. Limiting spots also raises perceived value: coaches with unlimited availability look like coaches with no clients.

27

The "Imagine" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

Imagine it's [3 / 6 / 12] months from now and you actually did it:

[PAINT THE AFTER-STATE — 3 short, vivid lines about what their life looks like with RESULT achieved. Be specific to your niche.]

Now here's the part nobody likes: in [SAME TIMEFRAME], you'll arrive at that date either way. The only variable is whether you show up as the same person — or that one.

Every client I've watched get there started the same way: one conversation.

Book the free call. Worst case, you leave with a plan. Best case, this post is your before photo.

WHY IT WORKS: Future-pacing lets prospects emotionally test-drive the result. Once they've FELT the after-state, staying the same starts to hurt — and the call is the escape route.

28

The "DM Me This Word" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

If you're serious about [RESULT], here's the easiest first step I can possibly give you:

DM me the word "[SIMPLE KEYWORD — e.g., READY]".

That's it. No forms, no commitment, no weirdness. I'll ask you 2 or 3 questions about where you're at, and if it makes sense, I'll send you my calendar link for a free call.

If it doesn't make sense, I'll tell you honestly and point you to something free that will help. Either way, you win.

One word. That's the whole first step. "[KEYWORD]" — I'm waiting.

WHY IT WORKS: Keyword DMs convert lurkers who'd never comment publicly. And a private conversation is the warmest possible path to your booking calendar. (Reply fast — speed matters.)

29

The "Last 90 Days" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

Look at your last 90 days with [YOUR NICHE]. Honestly.

Did anything meaningfully change? Or was it another 90 days of "working on it" — saving posts, making plans, starting over every other Monday?

No shame in it. But be honest about what it predicts: your NEXT 90 days will look exactly the same unless something in the system changes.

You don't need more time. You've had time. You need a different approach — and you already know it, or you wouldn't still be reading this.

Change the system. Book a free call with me this week — link in bio. 30 minutes now beats another 90 days of the same.

WHY IT WORKS: The 90-day mirror is uncomfortable in the most useful way. It converts vague dissatisfaction into a concrete pattern — and offers your calendar as the pattern-breaker.

30

The "Zero Risk" Post

THE POST — COPY & PASTE

Here's the full offer, no games:

A free call with me. We spend it 100% on YOUR situation — where you are, what's kept you stuck, and the fastest realistic path to [RESULT].

You leave with real clarity either way. If working together makes sense, I'll explain exactly how it works. If it doesn't, I'll tell you straight and you've lost nothing but gained a plan.

The cost of the call: nothing. The cost of another year of figuring it out alone: you already know.

My calendar is in my bio. Pick a time that works, and let's finally look at this properly.

WHY IT WORKS: Total transparency is the ultimate closer. When there's genuinely nothing to lose, the only people who don't book are the ones who were never going to — and you didn't want those calls anyway.

You now have zero excuses

Seriously — the #1 reason coaches don't get clients from social media is that they don't post consistently, and the #1 reason they don't post consistently is that they don't know what to say. You just lost that excuse 30 times over.

Your simple weekly system

Monday: One Authority or Myth-Buster post (sections 1 & 3) — start the week as the expert.

Wednesday: One Story post (section 2) — make them feel it.

Friday: One Engagement post (section 4) — end the week in the comments and DMs.

Every 2nd week, add: one Objection Crusher (section 5) or one Calendar Filler (section 6).

That's 3-4 posts a week, every category covered, and a direct path from your content to your booking calendar. Run this rotation and the 30 posts in this pack will carry you for months before you ever repeat one.

Final reminder: every single post in this pack has one job — to move people toward the booking calendar on your website. Keep your booking link in your bio, mention it naturally, and let the website do the rest. You focus on coaching. The system handles the clients.

Now go post #1. Today. Done beats perfect.